Jordan Brand's football team athletes will be receiving an exclusive Air Jordan 12 this week to celebrate the start of the latest Jordan shoes price NFL season.

Inspired by the gridiron, this player-exclusive shoe boasts football-inspired leather on the upper with Michael

Jordan's signature embossed on the tongue that's inspired by how the commissioner's signature is featured on an official football. Additional details include an orange sock liner to represent the pylons in the endzone of the football field, a white midsole, and a turf graphic printed within the translucent pods on the outsole. The shoes will also come in a Jordan shoes for sale special box that's inspired by a Jordan Brand locker with football-specific stickers and magnets placed throughout.

Similar to many PEs in the past, this Air Jordan 12 will not likely see a formal release at retailers, but check out detailed images of the shoe below. This new colorway of the Air Jordan 12 is a brand new colorway of the silhouette that comes dressed in a Jordan 11 red

Black and Game Royal color scheme. Notably reminiscent of the popular red/black "Flu Game" Air Jordan 12, this variation flaunts bold Game Royal as the main hue instead. Composed of premium black tumbled leather and blue adorning the textured suede overlay across its forefoot, the model is further detailed with more blue adorning the miniature branded side panels, Jordan 12 black branded heel and the entire rubber outsole to top off the two-tone style.
