"Exciting things are coming out of the adidas camp: the adidas 4d ultra boost womens! The venerable UltraBOOST OG has been kicking it for several years now, and while it's far from getting long in the tooth, it's getting new 4D soles. Perhaps most intriguing about this hybrid theory is the fact that adi have rendered the lattice-style soles in all-black, as opposed to the lurid green that's shaded previous 4D creations.

The new drop takes the adidas pod s3.1 mens green and keeps its signature EQT Cushion 2—inspired segmented tooling and BOOST heel, but completely reimagines the upper with a slick knit bootie, suede overlays, and a leather heel wrap. The most striking feature, without a doubt, is the colourful accents, which give the design a fun, youthful edge.

Appearing in a more contemporary colourway of a black upper sharply contrasted by bright neon orange and yellow, this is how to modernise a retro sneaker while preserving its original shape. Making the adidas Ixcon shoes black's lace 'cable' bright orange is a clever touch to contrast against the black. It also looks like adidas have gotten the midsole adiPRENE font pretty close to the OG's. Nice work.

Looking closer, this adidas day jogger womens features Black mesh on the upper while leather and synthetic runs throughout. Also, White adorns the Three Stripes branding on the panels that are outlined in Silver, while White also hits the heel counter. We also have Scarlet Red that appears on the top eyelet, top of the toe, heel, and hinted on the midsole. Finally, a Black Boost midsole and matching rubber outsole finishes the look."
